

Healthy Budget Passed At Marathon SEC Meet

Danger! — Dummy At Work

Seen here typing out his last column is a high-ranking member of the Daily's Sports Department. After filing the column, he proceeded onto the Lower Campus to cover the Pep Rally, where overly exuberant fans hung him from a tree and then cremated his remains.

The SEC has passed a budget involving the expenditure of almost $164,000.

In a ten hour meeting, which ended at five o'clock yesterday morning, McGill's student government approved all but two of the budgets of the organizations which fall under its jurisdiction.

The budget of the ASUS was felt to be "unrealistic" in certain aspects and that of the Law Undergraduate Society was considered to be making too many demands on the Students' Society finances. Both budgets were rejected to be re-presented in an improved form.

The exact figures passed were: expenses — $163,661.54, revenue — $160,629.77, excess of expenses over revenue — $3,031.77. The budgeted deficit will be covered from accumulated surplus.

"In doing this," Wilfred Hastings permanent Secretary-Treasurer of the Students' Society, pointed out, "we are pursuing the policy of the last four years of using up accumulated surplus by deficit budgeting. In this way the Student body is getting more activities than they are actually paying for."

DAILY

The largest budget presented to Council came from the "McGill Daily" which has operating expenses of more than $35,000. $17,000 of this will come from advertising profits and the remaining $18,000 from the Students Society.

The system by which the "Daily" will be financed has been changed. Instead of the paper receiving a statutory grant of $1.50 per student and then having the SEC cover the remaining deficit, the whole budget must be submitted to the SEC for approval. This year, because more students are attending the university, the "Daily's" circulation is being increased by 500 issues per day.

Following the "Daily", with regard to size of budgets, are the Students' Union ($29,629.31) and the SEC administrative offices ($24,282.76). Approximately $19,000 of the Student's Union Expenses comes from Students' Society Funds. The revenues come from profits of the book store, rentals and other miscellaneous items. The SEC offices have no means of making profit and thus all their expenses must be paid from Students' Society funds.

The Debating Union will be spending nearly $1,000 this year. Slightly more than $600 of this will be taken care of by the Winter Carnival registration fee.

MCWA will receive $2,600 from the SEC, spending $1,830 and collecting $2,230 in registration fees and donations. So far a total of $2,524 has been voted to the undergraduate societies.

Freshmen Reception is almost self-sufficient. Although they spent $1,196, they receive all the profits from the football dances and will only have to ask the SEC for $29. The "Annual" will show a small profit.

Gordon Echenberg, financial chairman of the SEC, has announced that there is a mandatory meeting for all presidents and secretaries of clubs and societies which had budgets under consideration. The meeting will take place this Friday in the Walter M. Stewart Room at 1 pm.

Echenberg also observed that "this is a healthy budget. Activities are more heavily sponsored this year than at any time in the past."

In other business the SEC appointed Lynn Kenney, B.A. 4, and Peter Dawson, Med 1, to the UMUN executive; Godfried Agama, B.A. 4, Wendy Laws, BScN and Jennifer Robinson BScN as delegates to the SGWU seminar on international affairs; and Michael Stein, BA 4, and A T Harrington, B Eng 5, as delegates to the SCUSA conference at West Point.

SGWU to Sponsor Seminar on Africa

"Africa in Transition" will be the topic of the Second Annual Seminar on International Affairs sponsored by the Students Societies of Sir George Williams University.

The Right Honourable Lester B. Pearson is the honorary president of the conference, to be held from October 27 to October 30. The opening address has been sent by Mr Adlai Stevenson.

The three students chosen to represent McGill at this conference are Godfried Agama, BA 4, Wendy Laws, Nursing 2, and Jennifer Robinson Nursing 2.

Africa has been chosen as the focal point of the seminar because of the vast change it is undergoing and because of the effects which this change is having on the international scene. The recent crisis in the Congo illustrates the emergence of a new force, that as yet is wild and untamed.

This force or change which is producing rapid economic, social, cultural and, most obviously political changes, will be discussed at the conference.

The seminar is being held in order to assist students to interpret events on that continent. The various topics will deal with all the aspects of this change starting with the Historical and Political Developments of Africa.

The official opening of the Seminar will be on Thursday, October 27 at 8:30 pm. when Dr. H. F. Hall, Principal of Sir George Williams University will deliver Adlai Stevenson's opening address.

On Friday at 8 pm. there will be a panel discussion on "Democracy and the New Africa", with Professor A. M. Keppel-Jones, T. Hodgkins, and E. E. McCullough.

"Socio-economic and Cultural Undercurrents" will be the topic for Saturday. Under this aspect Dr. Thomas Franck, of New York University will speak on "Custom and Conflict in Africa" at 2 pm.

On Sunday, "Africa on the International Scene" will be the main topic. This will consist of a panel discussion entitled "The Next Five Years-Problems and Prospects". Representatives of Nigeria, the United States, the United Kingdom, the Soviet Union and India have been invited to state their views on the subject.

OCTOBER 26, 1960

Go, Johnny, Go!

The results of Monday's municipal election reveal that Mr. Drapeau has regained the confidence of a large majority of the Montrealers who forsook him and voted for Mayor Fournier in the 1957 election. This perhaps can be attributed to Drapeau's careful behaviour during Fournier's term of office as well as to the ineffectual administration of the late Executive Committee and Council.

But a more basic factor in the Drapeau victory, we believe, was the hodge-podge collection of mayoralty and councillor candidates placed before the electorate. In a city where the populace is fed up with the whole existing civic administrative system, the chances of many independent or unaffiliated candidates being elected to office is slim. In such a city, voters tend to seek an administration which can present a comprehensive reform program.

Mr. Drapeau was the one mayoralty candidate to present himself as the leader of a party represented by a full slate of candidates. Although a new party, the Civic Party of Montreal took pains to acquaint the electorate with its views and policies on municipal government. The Civic Party advocated a parliamentary system for Montreal City Hall.

When the people went to the polls, the dominating tendency seems to have been for them to vote for a unified slate of candidates. In district after district, Monday night, two and three Civic Party candidates were returned in lieu of long-standing and well-known Independent incumbents.

When it was all over, Jean Drapeau and 44 of his followers had received a two-year mandate to show what the Civic Party can do at City Hall. Their majority is well tailored to parliamentary-type rule; this, it seems clear, is what the citizens of Montreal wanted; and the result did not surprise us.

We only hope that Mr. Drapeau will not be carried away with excessive zeal — many people fear he is prone to do so — and will soberly set to the task of implementing the many reforms set out in the CPM platform. We believe that Drapeau and his affiliates have both the ability and the means to give Montreal the kind of government it has long needed. Let us hope they set about to do so.

Share The Wealth

When members of the Students' Executive Council turned their attention early yesterday morning to the proposed budget of the Arts and Science Undergraduate Society, they were shocked into silence. It took several minutes for the first council member to utter a comment.

The budget allocated a heavy share of its income unreasonably. This is because the Arts and Science people simply have too much money to cover the cost of too little program. They actually have to seek out ways to expend their income. Sometimes this has humorous consequences, like the time a Christmas Dance, organized to lose several hundred extra dollars, ended up adding a substantial amount to the bothersome surplus.

A few years ago the S. E. C. found a partial solution: it invited the A.S.U.S. to cover 60% of the deficit incurred by campus clubs and societies which cater mainly to Arts and Science undergraduates. But, alas, even this drain left too much money floating around. Hence yesterday's recurrence of the old problem.

Wherein, then, lies the solution? Obviously, it seems to us, in allowing the A.S.U.S. to sponsor one of McGill's major campus activities, perhaps in conjunction with another undergraduate society which has too much money, such as the Engineering group. Perhaps the committee appointed by the S.E.C. could look into the advisability, for example, of allowing the A.S.U.S. and the E.U.S. to jointly sponsor the McGill Conference on World Affairs. These groups couldn't share their wealth with a more worthy project.

October 22nd... Up and after sending my wife to my aunt for the nonce on a mission to procure ducats for the latest arrive at His Majesty's did call Jane to cooke my egges, my head being of such large proportions from the imbibing of the night previous... not to mention several incidents in connection with the local gendarmerie at the rallye in environs of the place. Determined that further ventures in the direction of the festive atmosphere would undoubtedly be repulsed by the revitalized bodye of scholars at the place, their conduct seeming to have taken a turn for the better at least as concerns those things of weekende moment. Feeling that such participation would be difficult to bear in my present state, determined to spend the morning in contemplation with my Jane, thence at the return of my wife would wander by foot to the exhibit of Von Gough currently gracing the otherwise solemn confines of oure pillared edifice of commerciale culture. Thinking all those of spirit to be partaking of the sensuality of the occasion, was amazed to find so many of my recognition at the payntings. Those who might have been expected to be in support of the efforts of their representatives on the playing fields were making pilgrammage to this locale... an ambition admirable in its context, but rather out of place on suche occasions. These dark spectacled creatures (I wonder at their ability to see anything of the art, the light being so intollerable in the first instance) billed and cooed at the offerings and did present such a front of knowledge that, had I not recognized their type, (also from the males in tow: those of the tight breeches and uncombed locks with heavy sweaters and inevitable matching growthes) I would have been of a mind that their appreciation was based in truth. Not wishing to affiliate with this sad minority of representatives from the place I followed at safe distance enjoying the selection of works displayed therein... an exhibit which is highly recommended for weektyme consumption... until I was fairley bursting with colour and pallate. My returne to this haven at a later date being assured by the excellent fine nature of the canvasses, and feeling purged yet deye, did leave those denizons of the world of malconformity, now striking out for the pleasures of the spirit, those easy delights of the world... dancing, eating, drinking, all things being satisfied by the presence of my comely wench... so we to the matter at hand.

Dear Mr. Peeps:
Me thinks you are too much making of sweet Jane!

Letter to the Editors

Hits Daily Conservatism

The obvious sacrifice of objective reporting for a crude attempt at humor in your coverage of Thursday's soap-box preacher, indicates the Daily's refusal to take seriously anything that is different...

It would be well to remind you that soap-box preaching is not as inconsequential as your reporting would indicate. Last October it was tried at McGill, but the Daily ignored it. It was not ignored, however, by several students at UBC. Inspired by the McGill experiment, they set up their soap-boxes on the UBC campus. Theological students were joined by campus political groups and others in soap-box oratory. They were so successful that coverage was given by the Vancouver papers and by major campus papers across Canada.

If the Daily concerned itself with activities that are radical, and not treat these activities as worthy only of the scorn of sophisticated college students, the so-called apathy of said students would be seen as the figment of a copy writers imagination.

CUCND To March

by TOM TAUSKY

"The challenge of our day confronts us; have we got the courage to face it? We must give our answer now".

There were the final words of the narrator of "Aldermaston, 1958", a film shown at the first meeting of the McGill chapter of the Combined Universities Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, held yesterday. A talk by Dimitri Roussopoulos, Campaign Chairman of CUCND concluded the meeting.

The film described the first protest march from London to the British centre of H-Bomb manufacture, Aldermaston. The number of marchers has swelled from 9,000 in the first march to 126,000 in the final leg of the 1960 march.

A folk song improvised by the marchers revealed their feelings on the subject:

Last night I lay a dreaming...
I dreamed the bomb had dropped
A million people were dead.

...You gave the politicians their

You sat in front of the T.V.
You could have forced them to

You could have made them

After the film, Mr. Roussopoulos asked "If the British can do it, why can't we?" He went on to explain exactly what CUCND is: "a non-political organization of students and faculty for the unilateral denunciation of nuclear weapons by Canada".

"This would be a bold new step, proving Canada's sincerity and enabling her to become a leader of the middle powers. The middle powers could then put pressure on the two great powers to secure abolition of nuclear weapons", Mr. Roussopoulos continued.

"The United States has enough weapons to destroy Russia; Russia can do the same to the U.S.; this has created an international deadlock, but the deadlock cannot go on forever. Nuclear weapons are spreading throughout the world; such countries as West Germany and Italy will have them; the danger of a nuclear war increases all the time".

Returning to the activities of the Canadian CUCND, Mr. Roussopoulos stated that the organization, established last year, has grown to eight university chapters. Last year, a petition bearing 1100 signatures was brought to Ottawa by 100 representatives.

"This year, activity will be on a much larger scale. Five hundred representatives from the University of Toronto alone will join the motorcade and march to Ottawa on Christmas Day and it is hoped an equal number of Montreal university students will participate. This should be the Aldermaston of Canada" Mr. Roussopoulos said.

On Armistice Day, a procession of Montreal students will march through Montreal, leaving the Roddick Gates at 12:15 and laying a wreath at the cenotaph at Dominion Square, while in Toronto a Folk Festival sponsored by University students will be held at Massey Hall.

Money Is Dominating Policies Of Parliament

Dr. Cyril Flannigan, one-time CCF campaigner, called Prime Minister Diefenbaker naive in his attempts to solve the Canadian unemployment problem. He stated that we are "caught in a trap", because big-money interests have a dominating influence over the policies of Parliament.

Speaking during the second of six weekly study groups at SCM on "A Rational View of Politics and Economics", Dr. Flannigan explained that the government policies toward unemployment involved an unbalanced budget with a large deficit.

In order to keep the economy stable, the Conservatives were forced to ask the Bank of Canada for a loan. Unfortunately for the Prime Minister and his colleagues, however, the Bank is run by Canada's high financiers, and they granted the loan only under the condition that the government stop its inflationary spending on unemployment.

By this example, Dr. Flannigan hoped to show how the financial community dominates politics, and he accused our economy of running on a "hit-or-miss" basis. This, he said, results in the neglect of vital public matters such as education and health. Dr. Flannigan concluded that the only way to salvage our society is to set up a planned economy undred rigid governmental control.

Sports View Point

The Coffin Corner

By JIM GRANT

It is unfortunate that the Blues, with such talented personnel, utilize such an unimaginative attack. Coach White has not changed his attack for years and each season he attempts to fit his personnel into a standardized offensive system. The success of the Toronto team in recent years has resulted, not from outmanoeuvring their opponents, but simply by overwhelming them.

NUMBERS GAME

Whereas Queens or Western will beat you by a blocked kick, a brilliant run, or an eighty yard pass play, Toronto depends on its weight of numbers to eventually wear you down. However, rival teams now have the advantage of knowing that their scouting information will be reliable. As Toronto has very few surprises, their offence becomes ineffective if the power of their attack can be defensed.

The Redmen contained Toronto's running attack so effectively that they were forced into a belated shift to the passing game. The only way the Redmen can be beaten is through the air, and had Toronto opened up the game in the first half, the Redmen would have experienced more difficulty containing their ground game.

Offensively, McGill has been surprising. The key, of course, has been the quarterback and Tom Skypeck has become what was expected of former American import, Dick Carr. The difference is that Skypeck has retained his enthusiasm for a game which to him is still fun, a game which Carr had outgrown before his arrival at McGill.

DANGEROUS DUO

Last Saturday Skypeck showed a thorough knowledge of the Toronto defence. The utilization of halfback Lambert showed an ideal combination of offensive strategy. Having been informed as to the excessive time he was receiving on pass plays, he began setting up the Blues' defensive halfback who, incidentally, is normally a very capable halfback. Unfortunately, when Skypeck and Lambert were finished with him, knowledgeable observers were left rather with a feeling of pity than disdain for a player who had been the object of perhaps the best executed sequence of plays this season. The only constant flaw in an otherwise excellent performance, was the faking of trap plays which failed to fool even the girls in the students' section.

Although it is not the policy of this column to mention players by name, such an outstanding performance by Skypeck and Lambert deserve some recognition.

Ironically, the Redmen Achilles Heels, which is usually a lack of depth, may this year be their own stadium. Lack of practice facilities has resulted in the eventual disappearance of what passed for grass in August. Combined with inadequate drainage, this deficiency has resulted in a veritable quagmire. Mud reduces everything to a common denominator, and next Saturday's game, which should be decided by team superiority, could possibly result in a mud bath to be decided on the whim of Lady Luck.

Five Redmen Listed In Official League Scoring

After last week's two crushing defeats by McGill and Queen's over Toronto and Western respectively, the standings in the Intercollegiate League have taken on a very unfamiliar form.

The Redmen are currently in a second place tie with the University of Western Ontario Mustangs, two points behind the league leading Golden Gaels; Dalt Whyte's Toronto Blues are in the league cellar one win out of second spot.

Next Saturday, the red hot Redmen will play host to the Mustangs while Queen's test themselves against the Blues in Toronto. McGill, on their first two game winning streak since 1957, will be out to avenge their 17-13 loss to the Mustangs when the two teams met earlier this season. Also, a win would give the Red and White at least undisputed possession of second place and set the stage for the showdown encounter at Kingston the following Saturday. Arrangements are being made for a special train for McGill supporters who wish to make the trip to Kingston. Final details will appear in Monday's "Daily".

Robin Ritchie of Queen's continues to lead the scoring race. He picked up 17 points last weekend to push his total to 44, a full twenty points over Willie Lambert of the Redmen. It is interesting to note that Ritchie has accounted for almost half of his team's points this year.

Harry Haukka collected thirteen points over the weekend with his seven-for-seven booting effort and now is in third place with 19 points.
